PAP :

Equipment developed to compare slipping of paper samples with and without slipproofing agents. Apparatus made of stainless steel, panel integrated with digital display of inclining angle. Panel located on lateral of equipment.

A gear-motor moves the board that inclines in different angles up to a maximum of 60°. Provided with remote control (connected through cable), with three push buttons: one to start moving board up, a second to move the board down, and a third button to stop. A digital display shows the angle. The samples (paper sheets, boxes) are placed on the board, which inclines. When the first sample starts slipping the operator stops the board from moving on through remote control, and reads the angle indicated on the display.

With a new start to move up on the remote control, the operator continues with the test until the second sample starts slipping on another angle.

To evaluate paper samples aluminum holders may be used:
